Further Discussion on Amendm Confession of Faith.

THE WASHINGTON PRESBYTERY.

The freedom of the human will furnished the topic for a long and very earnest discussion at the meeting of the Washington city presbytery

at the Fourth Presbyterian Church this moru-

ing. It was the third day of the meeting to

Closed all day Thanksgiving.

LAST REMNANT DAY TILL AFTER . FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27.

o-This space during December for Holiday Goods. WE shall open up Friday morning with the largest and most interesting "Remnant" ofering of the present season. Needing more room in all departments for the proper display of our magnificent stock of "Holiday" goods, which will surpase anything heretofore shown in Washington, we have thoroughly ransached
the several stocks and taken therefrom everything that savors of a remnant—all "short lengths," "odds and ends," "broken sizes," soiled or mussed things, Bries-brac, Glass Ware and anything that is chipped.scratched or otherwise defaced. These things will be marked Ware and anything that is chipped scratched or otherwise defaced. These things will be marked at prices that give you no idea of their worth. Many an odd bit of silk, ribbon or velvet will be found that can be utilized for Christmas. Black and Colored Dress Goods offer many desirable lengths in new and seasonable stuffs. Many odd pleces in Bric-a-brac and Japanese Departments. Picture and Wrap-Departments, indeed, every department in the house presents opportunities to economical folks heretofore unheard of. Can give you but an "inkling" in this report of what we have. We suggest an early call, for the best, as you know from former experience, are taken up first.

CLOSE OF THE CONSERVATIVE CAUCUS

in spite of the fact that the minority pointed to the fact that Lord Salisbury yesterday evening pledged them free trade. This caucus also favored the suggestion that localities to acquire lands should be created for those who are desirous of obtaining small rural holdings. Finally the caucus condemned the proposition to allow illiterate people to vote. The convention was then closed with cheers for the queen, the country, Lord Salisbury and the conservative party.

CAUSED BY A FLIRT.

GRANTVILLE, GA., Nov. 25.—Wilkes James, the son of a prominent farmer, was shot and killed yesterday by Edward Jenkins, the son of a neighbor. Both young men were rivals for the hand of a young lady here. The girl kept the two men in suspense, first favoring one and then the other. Ten days ago both of the young men called upon the girl at the same time. There was a game of "freeze out," and when they parted Jenkins told James that the next time they met would be the last. Yesterday they came together four miles from town, and both drew revolvers and began firing. James fell dead with a bullet through his head. Jenkins gave himself up to the police.

"It was, in every sense but one, and for that deficiency the convention was not in any sense responsible. The published reports of our proceedings were most unreliable, and in many instances we know they were wilfully falsified. I was chairman of the press committee, and as such gave out all the information the public had any use for, but everything we did was purposely mutilated.

"One story sent out and scattered broadcast was to the effect that our membership in the northwest had decreased 50 per cent. The secretary's report shows that we gained in membership 100,000. Then the statement was printed that we had split on the subtreasury proposition. The subtreasury resolution was enthusiastically indorsed by the entire convention. No body of men ever suffered from such persistent and on the subtreasury proposition. The subtreasury resolution was enthusiastically indorsed by the entire convention. ## WHAT MR. CHASE SAYS.

His Views of the Proposed Arrangement for Electing District Delegates. Mr. Calvin Chase, editor of the Bee, the leader of the opposition element or what claims to be the progressive younger portion of the District republicans, did not seem to be bowed down by the decision of the national committee unfavorable as it was to his views. Mr. Chase, however, made no bones of denouncing the Gleeson-Carson firm in vigorous language. "The effect of the action of the national committee," said Mr. Chase, "in refusing to allow us the system of registration in the city will be that not one prominent white and few prominent colored republicans will take any be that not one prominent white and few prominent colored republicans will take any part in the choice of delegates next year. There was a tendency in the national committee toward Mr. Blaine for Fresident and the idea seemed to be that if the old method was allowed to remain Mr. Glesson would be able to control the District in favor of Blaine. The true sentiment, however, in this city, I believe, is in favor of the renomination of Mr. Harrison, and the renomination of Mr. Harrison, and the people will, I think, select Harrison delegates. Our object was to purify the politics here by a simple and straightforward method of elections, which would result in bringing out the better class of republicans, whose voices are never heard now amid the blare and blustering of the so-called mass meetings will be even worse than took place in 1888. Especially will the fight be bitter over the selection of the central committee, as only one delegate from each district is to be chosen. There is no doubt that there will be contesting members of the central committee, as only one delegate from each district is to be chosen. There is no doubt that there will be contesting members of the central committee, as only one delegate from each district is to be chosen. There is no doubt that there will not be half a dosen white republicans who will take part, and not one-third of the twenty-two members of the central committee will committee will be white.

"In some districts three delegations will contest the seats in the convention. We propose to continue the fight and win if we can by fair means.

"The national committee, in its decision, thought it was acting for the best, but it did not understand the politics of Washington.

"We wish and still wish to send delegates to the national senvention who would command the respect of any body of men, who would be able to talk good English. There was no desire for white supremacy, as Mr. Carson has claimed, but merely a desire to allow every republican, even if he did happen to be either a white or colored respectable man, to have a say in the election of delegates. We wanted to send men like Commissioner Douglass, or B. H. Warner, or M. M. Parker, or Frederick Douglass, men who would take a position in any convention, would be respected and their opinions carry some weight and who could talk two connecutive sentences without committing homicids on the language of the country."

The Earl of Lytton was born November 8, 1831, and was the son of Bulwer, the novelist, poet, dramatist had diplomat. He was educated at Harrow and at Bonn. He entered the diplomatic service as attache to the British legation in this city in 1849 while his uncla, Bir Hanry Bulwer, was minister. He afterwards served at Paris, The Hague, St. Petersburg, Constantinopic, Vienna, Copenhagen, Atheses, Lieben and Madrid. Disraeli appointed him vicercy of India, where he remained until 1869, when he became an earl. His ambittion was to be ashbessedor to Paris, and the became seven years later. His fame will test upon his poema, which made famous his num de plums, "Owen Meredith." His most popular though set his latest work is "Lucille." Life of Lord Lytten.

"Will we endeavor to elect Turner? Why of course we will. There is no choice left us. The republicans will make no nomination; at least that is what republican members of the allimance say. Of course none of the republicans can vote for Meredith, but there is no reason why every one of them should not cast his ballot for Turner. Two weeks ago a fire was discovered in the vestibule of the building occupied by Free's book store, and about the same time a similar attempt was made at 1334 G street. Yesterday morning, almost simultaneously with the discovery of fire at Dr. Stanton's, a blase was found to be eating a hole in the hallway at 1338 G street. There was considerable damage done to this house.

All of these fires have been started in the early morning, between midnight and 4 o'clock, and the methods are very similar.
